Frederick Williams, delegate from New London to the convention of the National Association of Civil Service Employes at Washington, D. C., last

National Association of Civil Service Employes at Washington, D. C., last week made the following remarks on civil service retirement:

"It gives me great pleasure to be present at this convention today as the representative of the civil service employes of New London, Conn., organized as Branch 238 of this association. While I do not expect to be able to throw any new light on the subject of civil service retirement, I wish to say that the civil service employes whom it is my privilege to represent are solidly and sincerely in favor of this measure.

"It would be no more than proper to expect the United States government to take the first step, to be a pioneer in establishing the policy of providing for the retirement of its servants to show the way to private enterprise has adopted this system.

The engagement of Miss Lena Shappito of Franklin street to Isaac Rosen of the West Side was announced Sunday evening at a party given by her bridge of the policy of providing for the retirement. I wish to say that the chiefs of bureaus, the fine who are in a position to know, have in many cases gone on record in favor of this step.

"We believe that adequate provison for the retirement of faithful employes is not only a just and equitable measure, but that it will be found decidedly advantageous to the United States as an employer, and I think this is the opinion of every responsible person who has investigated the matter. We believe that a non-contributory system is the best one for all concerned, and I think you will find that the large corrogations which have the large corporations which have adopted the policy of providing for superannuated employes, have gener-ally adopted this system.

Other temples from various parts of North America have equally elaborate plaus for the 1915 pilgrimage.

A Daily Living Death.

"Self respecting, able bodied, passing daily through a living death, these thousands of blinded war victims are being slowly killed, not by their injuries, not by starvation, but by the apparatus propagates the propagates of the propagates o juries, not by starvation, but by the apparently permanent hopelessness of their situation. Six months' training, on the other hand, will educate each one of them in some trade not requiring sight. A single contribution of several hundred dollars will go far to make one of these blinded soldiers self supporting for life," the appeal states. The appeal is being sent to 120,000 people of prominence throughout the United States.

Among the ladies who are active in the fund's work in Europe and America are Lady (Arthur) Paget, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitiney, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. John Astor, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Mrs. George A. Keesler, Mrs. R. Valentine Webster. Acting as honorary treasurers, with Mr. Vanderlip, are Sir Edward Holden, chairman of the London City and Midland bank, and M. Georges Pallain, governor-general of the Bank of France.

Mr. Pearson, the English newspaper proprietor, who is on the fund's executive committee, is now living at St. Dunstan's with 130 blinded soldiers and saliors to whose rehabilitation he is devoting his life.

This fund, although specifically organized to aid the blind of three nations, will ultimately contribute benefactions upon every blinded person throughout the entire world, its officials say. According to statistics, the world, a year before the war broke out, contained 2,500,600 blind. The number of blind who will be added to this total by the war cannot be estimated until years after the war itself is over.

President Leavens announced Monday that he had a supply of small pecket banks which will be supplied to any responsible parties who are known to the bank officials for the collection of dimes. The banks have on their faces a picture of a blind soldier and on the back are the names of the officials in charge of the fund. Each bank is numbered and a record is kept of the numbers so as to show who have taken banks for collection.
